

Remembering my mother's advice when it came time for Linda and me to raise our own children, we tried to keep it simple. Here are Savannah (second from right) and Trevor (second from left) enjoying ice cream cones with friends at a small general store. The most valuable commodity when raising children is time to spend with them.