

connection. And I constantly reinforce it by doing Mean Dad things like making him sit in those crappy economy seats. Financial literacy is not about hoarding cash. It's about recognizing and respecting money for its true value: the personal freedom it allows you to enjoy.

SIX SAFE SUMMER JOBS FOR TEENAGERS

Don't worry: I'm not going to suggest you send your kid off to work on a bumper-making machine line or strapped into a dangerous harness, washing windows high in the city skies. Here are some safe summer jobs that can actually be quite lucrative. Encourage your teen to start the job search early. Many places recruit their summer staff as early as January.

1. Golf caddy. There's a fortune waiting at the neighborhood golf course. Most caddies earn between $50 and $100 a bag. Though your child will have to be on his or her feet four to five hours at a time, the work is fairly straightforward: carrying bags, cleaning balls and repairing divots. If your son or daughter is an extra-eager caddy who is willing to work a double shift, he or she could rake in as much as $200 to $300 a day.
2. Summer entrepreneur. If your family lives in Ontario, your children have access to a very cool program called Summer Company. The program is designed to help young entrepreneurs between the ages of 15 and 29 start a summer business. Your son or daughter can apply for a $3,000 grant, and if they are selected, they will receive the start-up money as well as advice and mentorship from local business leaders. If your child has expressed an interest in owning a small