

get the job, so encourage your teens to be persistent; if they don't get it the first time, urge them to apply again.

6. Caregiver. Does your teenager have a passion for helping the elderly? Consider finding a way to monetize his or her skills. He or she will need to be up-front about their age and lack of professional training, but there are plenty of positions for non-medical assistants. This could take the form of helping an elderly neighbor or relative, or offering services to a seniors' facility. Many centers are always on the lookout for young, bright people to come in and interact with their residents.