

How much can you expect to spend on a parent or loved one's long-term care? Again, it depends on where you live, but take a look at the chart below:

PRIVATE ANNUAL COSTS OF LONG-TERM CARE FOR NON-MARRIED SENIORS

Source: Fernandes, Natasha, and Spencer, Byron G. "The Private Cost of Long-Term Care in Canada: Where You Live Matters." QSEP Research Report No. 443, Research Institute for Quantitative QSEP Studies in Economics and Population, McMaster University of Social Science, October 2010.

These are the average yearly costs, province by province—money that residents and their families paid directly to long-term care facilities, in families where the seniors made an “average” income during their working years ($36,800 before tax in 2008). The numbers are certainly lower than they would be in the U.S., but the rates are not exactly cheap. Private accommodation in long-term care facilities can cost up to $6,000 per month. See the table below.

COSTS OF RETIREMENT HOMES/RESIDENCES BY PROVINCE