

GIVE YOUR MARRIAGE A FIGHTING CHANCE—AND IF THAT DOESN'T WORK ...

Emotions are expensive. Whether you're madly in love or spitting mad, your wallet will take a hit. Think about it: at the beginning of a relationship, so many people ply their lovers with champagne and caviar. At the end of it, they're coughing up $400 an hour for a good divorce lawyer. It seems the more intense the emotions, the higher the cost.

If you are contemplating divorce, this chapter is for you. I'm going to work very hard to help you separate the emotional aspect of divorce from the financial aspect. A divorce will savage your savings and decimate your dynasty. Thank goodness you're reading this book, because I am about to save you from one of the biggest mistakes you could ever make.

Money Mistake: A Divorce Isn't That Expensive, Right?

The Fix: Consider the Unexpected Costs

In my last book, I reviewed the up-front costs of divorce—uncontested versus contested, plus the extra costs of a separation agreement and/or child support agreement. Here's the thing: the
