

6.5

Staffing Fundas

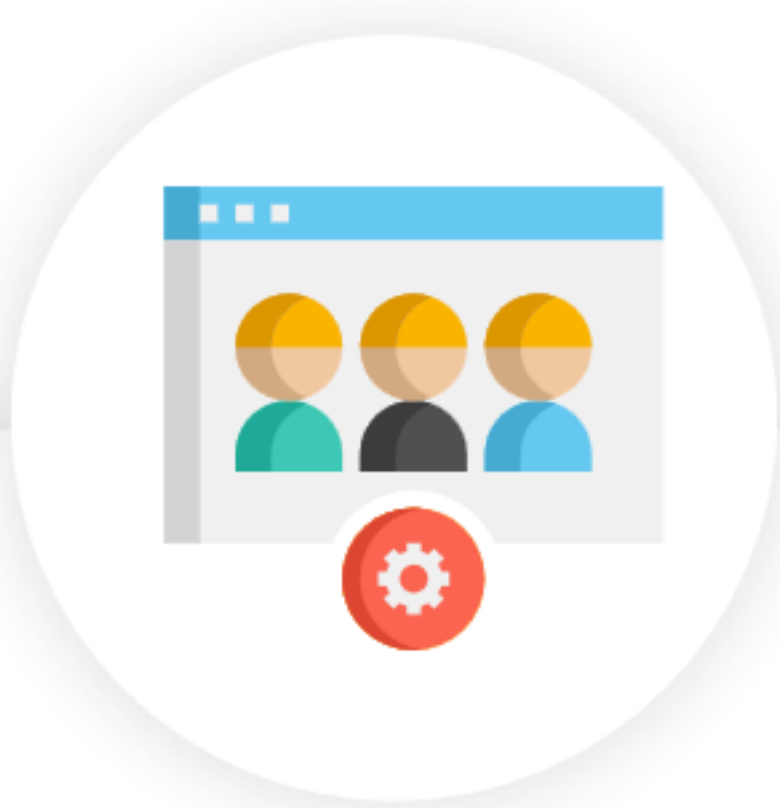

Understanding Staff Augmentation and Consulting: Staff augmentation refers to providing skilled consultants or resources to supplement a client’s existing workforce on a temporary or project basis. This model allows clients to access specialised expertise and scalable resources without the commitment of permanent hires.

It is distinct from traditional consulting engagements, where the firm typically takes a more strategic or advisory role.

In staff augmentation engagements, the consultants become an extension of the client’s team, working under the client’s direction and integrating with their processes and methodologies. This model benefits clients facing resource constraints, skill gaps, or fluctuating workloads.

Staffing Models

On-site Staffing

In this model, consultants work on-site at the client’s premises, fully integrated with the client’s team. This approach facilitates seamless collaboration, knowledge transfer, and cultural alignment.

Off-site Staffing

Consultants work remotely from the consulting firm’s facilities or remotely, with regular coordination and communication with the client. This model is suitable for projects without physical on-site presence or when geographic constraints exist.

Hybrid Staffing

This combines on-site and off-site staffing, where some consultants work on-site while others contribute remotely. This model offers flexibility and allows leveraging resources from different locations while maintaining close collaboration.