

For Example

When working with a highly assertive and direct client, you must match their assertiveness with confidence and clarity in your communication. This client may appreciate a straightforward approach with clear explanations and actionable recommendations. On the other hand, a more reserved client may require a gentler, more patient communication style, allowing them time to process information and express their thoughts and concerns.

Highly Assertive and Direct Client

Type Here.....

Straight-forward approach

Reserved Client

Type Here.....

Process information and express their thoughts and concerns