

Conducting a SWOT Analysis (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats)

Once you've completed your self-assessment, the next step is to conduct a comprehensive SWOT (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats) analysis.

A SWOT analysis is a strategic planning tool that helps you identify and evaluate your firm's internal strengths and weaknesses, as well as external opportunities and threats.

Strengths and Weaknesses (Internal Factors)

Strengths are the positive internal factors that give your consulting firm an advantage over competitors. Examples include a highly skilled team, proprietary methodologies, strong industry relationships, or a reputation for delivering exceptional results.

Conversely, weaknesses are internal factors that may hinder your firm's growth or competitiveness. These could include limited resources, a lack of specialised expertise in certain areas, outdated technology, or a weak brand presence.

 Strengths	 Weaknesses
Highly skilled team	Limited Resources
Proprietary Methodologies	A lack of specialised expertise in certain areas
Strong Industry Relationships	Outdated Technology
Reputation for delivering exceptional results	Weak Brand Presence
