

The data migration plan should also include strategies for data cleansing and validation. Legacy data may contain errors, duplicates, or inconsistencies that could compromise the integrity of the ERP system if not addressed.

Organisations should establish data quality rules and perform data profiling to identify and resolve issues before migrating the data to the new system. This may involve manual data cleansing efforts and the implementation of automated data validation and transformation rules within the migration tools.

