

Production Forecasting and Inventory Optimisation

In the manufacturing sector, accurate production forecasting is crucial to avoid underproduction or overproduction, which can lead to significant financial losses.

Consulting firms have leveraged AI-driven predictive models to analyse historical data, consumer trends, seasonality patterns, and other relevant factors to provide their clients with precise production forecasts. This has enabled manufacturers to optimise their inventory levels, streamline supply chains, and minimise wastage, resulting in substantial cost savings and improved operational efficiency.