

The 3 C's Framework

The 3 C's framework is a widely used approach in consulting that helps consultants structure their analysis and recommendations around three key areas: Company, Competition, and Customers. This framework ensures that consultants take a holistic view of the business problem, consider internal and external factors, and develop well-rounded strategies addressing all critical aspects.

The 3 C's framework is essential because it provides a structured way to analyse a business problem from multiple perspectives. By looking at the company's internal capabilities, competitive landscape, and customer dynamics, consultants can develop a comprehensive understanding of the challenges and opportunities faced by the client. This approach helps to ensure that recommendations are robust, actionable, and aligned with the client's overall business objectives.

The 3 C's framework is applicable in a wide range of consulting scenarios, including:

- Strategic planning and business transformation initiatives
- Product development and market entry strategies
- Operational efficiency and process improvement projects
- Customer experience and loyalty optimisation
- Mergers, acquisitions, and integration projects
