

my motivational furnace. I will accept compliments from everyone, but I will accept limitations from no one. Instead, I turn those limitations into fuel. And you need to do the same.

As you begin your millionaire journey, you've got to figure out where your motivation comes from. What's driving you forward? What's fueling your wealth-building engine? Maybe you didn't have much growing up, and that old sense of financial stress is driving you. Or maybe your parents were successful, and their success has driven you to pursue your own. Maybe you're starting to get anxious about your retirement or, better yet, starting to dream about your retirement. Maybe you have the encouragement of friends and mentors pushing you forward. Your motivation can come from anywhere. Wherever it comes from, though, you've got to harness it and turn it into energy to accomplish your millionaire goals.