
We lived in the same $125,000 house we bought in year five of our marriage—even after we retired at age forty-seven. Our coworkers kept moving up in house, but we didn't like giving up the almost 10% transaction cost to sell and move. We figure we saved about half a house by not keeping up with our peer group. We bought a $600,000 house for my wife's parents (with cash) and eventually moved into the house when they passed away.

—Bill and Lynda, $9.5 million net worth
