Get a clear picture of where you want to go. This goes back to the dream meeting I talked about. You (and your spouse if you're married) need to know exactly what you're working toward. And, like your goals, you need to write this vision down. It may be the only thing that keeps you going on days when your energy is down, the road seems long, and the effort doesn't seem worth it. In those times, you'll need to remind yourself why you're working so hard to begin with.
