

Reward Yourself

Celebrating your accomplishments should not be a once-and-for-all event when you finally hit financial independence. Instead, you need to build in incremental milestones and reward yourself for reaching them. No, I'm not saying you should spend $100 for every $200 you save. However, there's nothing wrong with saying, "When my net worth hits $250,000, I'm taking my family to Disney World to celebrate!" Stopping to celebrate the small wins will keep you excited about pushing through to the next milestone, and all those little victories add up over time!