

Today, Anna and Neal are living their lifelong dream of traveling the world. Their lifestyle has changed a lot, but it's changed in ways most people wouldn't notice. They still live simple lives, but travel has become a huge part of their world. They're also enjoying the freedom that comes with financial independence. They can do whatever they want any day of the week. If they wake up on Monday and decide to head off on a spontaneous two-week road trip, they can. They worked hard for thirty years, and now they can spend the next thirty or forty years not working at all. The best part is, nobody has a clue. Anna said, "Nobody would know that we are millionaires because we live very simply."

That's something we've seen over and over in the millionaires we studied. It turns out that, once you can afford to buy whatever you want, you may not want to anymore.
