

Don't cut off a speedbump like that show and think it's a descending triangle. It's not.

Focus on Failures

Figure 65.4 shows an example of what traders hate. The breakout is downward but lasts just 2 days before price gets sucked back into the mothership. Then, price takes to the air and climbs. When it rises above the top of the triangle, the descending triangle chart pattern becomes a failure (it busts the downward breakout in this case).
