

The Wrong Kind of Wizardry
Costs Rear Their Ugly Head
Investors Get Precisely What They Don't Pay For A Question So Important

Chapter 2 - Too Much Speculation, Not Enough Investment

A Giant Distraction
A Loser's Game
Speculation Is in the Driver's Seat
Black Swans and Market Returns
Black Swans and Investment Returns
Tortoises Win
Hares Win (But How Can That Be?)
The Perils of Market Timing
Striking a Balance

Chapter 3 - Too Much Complexity, Not Enough Simplicity

Derivatives: Dancing to the Music
Marketers Win, Investors Lose
"Don't Just Stand There. Do Something!"
Mutual Funds: Lowering the Bar
Sometimes for Better, but Mostly for Worse
The Innovation Blunderbuss
Back to Basics
An All-Too-Predictable Outcome

BUSINESS

Chapter 4 - Too Much Counting, Not Enough Trust

Government: Making the Numbers Fit
Finance: Attributing Certitude to History
The Experts Are Wrong . . . Again