

Values and Profits
The Gale of Creative Destruction

LIFE

Chapter 8 - Too Much Focus on Things, Not Enough Focus on Commitment

Boldness, Commitment, and Providence
Commitment to Family and Community
The Commitment to Citizenship

Chapter 9 - Too Many Twenty-First-Century Values, Not Enough Eighteenth-Century Values

The Age of Reason
The Prototypical Eighteenth-Century Man
Entrepreneurs and Capitalists
The Impartial Spectator
“The Moral History of U.S. Business”
A Merchant and a Man
Returning Stewardship to Capitalism
On Virtue

Chapter 10 - Too Much “Success,” Not Enough Character

Flawed Measures of Wealth . . .
. . . and of Fame and Power
The Means, Not the End
A Special Burden
Competition for What?
“Without Character and Courage, Nothing Else Lasts”
Wondering about the Rabbit We Chase

WRAPPING UP: WHAT’S ENOUGH?