

Cost of Living Differences

If you're planning a move to a new city, it's important to know the difference in the cost of living. What sounds good in your hometown may not pay the bills in a new location, depending on the cost of living in that city.

Many sites on the Internet provide "cost of living" calculators. You enter the city you're moving from and the city you're moving to, and your current salary, and the calculator will tell you how much you'd have to earn in the new city to equal your buying power where you are now. We all know that cities such as New York are outrageously expensive compared to many other parts of the country, but you may be surprised at the cost of living in some smaller or more remote cities.