

One of the most important things you can teach your kids is how advertising can influence their buying decisions, and how they can resist giving in to the advertiser's message that buying its product makes kids look cool or makes them feel good. Help them realize that brand-name jeans, for example, are identical to other jeans, except for the label, but cost a lot more.