

- 3 percent—High-yield bonds
- 13 percent—Intermediate-term bonds
- 19 percent—Short-term bonds
- 5 percent—Cash equivalents

Aggressive Investor

An aggressive investor is mostly concerned with long-term growth of capital. This investor is comfortable with dramatic account value fluctuations, and invests mostly in stocks.

- 32 percent—Large-cap stocks
- 12 percent—Mid-cap stocks
- 8 percent—Small-cap stocks
- 10 percent—Alternative investments
- 28 percent—International stocks
- 10 percent—Intermediate-term bonds

This is just a basic template that you can use to compare and contrast against your existing holdings. As you get more advanced, you'll find that the classifications can get split into more and more detail. For example, large-cap stocks can be further split into large-cap growth and large-cap value. Likewise, international stocks might include large developed countries and smaller, emerging markets.
