

to any other person in a written will. See also joint tenancy with right of survivorship.

term life insurance: Life insurance that pays the beneficiary a predetermined amount of money as long as the covered individual dies within a specified period of time (the term of the policy).

whole life insurance: Insurance that covers an individual for his or her whole life rather than a specified term. Whole life policies contain a savings component that allows cash to accumulate over time.

will: A legal document that specifies how a person's belongings will be disposed of upon his or her death. It can also identify a legal guardian for children.

401(k): A defined-contribution retirement plan that allows participants to contribute pretax dollars to various investments.