

Questionable Credit Card Offers

If you have poor credit, you're more susceptible to questionable credit offers, so stay on your toes. Don't fall for offers of easy credit, ads that require you to call a 1-900 number (you'll pay a fee for the call and may never see the credit card), or offers to repair your credit. You have the legal right to correct any errors in your credit report by directly contacting the credit-reporting bureaus; don't pay someone to do this for you. Some credit-repair companies make false claims about their ability to clean up your credit. Only the creditor or the credit-reporting bureau can remove a debt from your record, and the only way to clean up your credit history is by making payments on time for several years and paying off your debts.
