

dining dunces that have little to no common sense or courtesy. While most all of you will know these, I feel they are at least worth saying:

Just because it is a buffet, doesn't mean you don't have to tip. Even if they only pick up your plates, your servers deserve the minimum for your region.

Don't take more than you can eat at one time. Wasting food is a no-no, no matter where you are.

Don't let little kids get their own food. Most places have a 10-years-or-older policy for the buffet line.

Clean up after yourself. It's a restaurant, not an abandoned lot. Pick your trash up off the floor, and try to make the server's job at least tolerable. They work hard, too.

We look forward to our monthly outings at a buffet-style restaurant. When a family of six can eat well for under $50—that's a great deal! And with a wide variety of dining options, buffets can fit any style or budget.

—Linsey Knerl

55 Ways I Saved Time and Money Planning My Wedding

One gorgeous wedding, one “flashed by so fast I can barely remember it” reception, and one glorious, relaxing honeymoon later, I’m back. It was fabulous. Truly fabulous. Sure, it had its glitches and panicked moments, but the memories I have in my mind are of being surrounded by people I love on one of the most important days of my life, and those I’ll cherish forever.

On a more practical note, I started totaling the receipts from the whole affair yesterday, and was pleasantly surprised by what the numbers are saying. We did pretty well. How? Keep reading. Where we used a strategy, I tried to note it. Others were suggestions we pursued, and that would have saved us money, but that we rejected for one reason or another.