

be alone or among people, and where activities were available but not necessary. We almost spent a bunch of money on a package deal, until we realized that the small-town atmosphere Sayulita offered was more “us.” No matter what you want, you’ll be able to find the best deals if you know what you’re looking for.

48. Look into all-inclusive packages, especially in the off-season

This is what we almost did, and we almost got a killer deal and a five-night stay on the Mayan Riviera.

.....

49. Look for privately owned condo-style housing

.....

Often, you can rent condos by the day or by the week, with the week’s price being cheaper than seven days would be. Way to save yourself some serious money!

50. Plan the honeymoon way ahead

.....

Like with any travel, good deals are often available ahead of time. If you find one you like, snatch it up before it runs and gets away. We didn’t have this option, as we were engaged for less than six months.

51. Plan the honeymoon last-minute

.....

A little contrary to the above, but also true. When things don’t sell, they tend to go on sale. If you’re adventurous and not picky about where you go or what you get, you very well might stumble upon something fabulous!

.....

52. Find a place where you can cook your own meals

.....

Food is expensive. In some areas of the world, it’s less so, but it still costs money. If you can cook for yourselves (and don’t mind doing it), you may pay a little extra for the kitchen, but you’ll save overall. We did this, and found that it came in very handy when I had food poisoning too badly to eat anything even vaguely Mexican.

53. Get off the beaten track

.....

Why? Because you get to see more local color. And? It’s cheaper. At Sayulita, we got all the beach, water sports, and surfer vibe we could handle, without Puerto Vallarta’s prices. Yahoo!

54. Kayak.com

If you haven’t used Kayak, you should. For any plane tickets. I did some site
