
16. Jump rope

If your gift recipient wants some intense exercise, a jump rope is an excellent choice.

17. Deck of cards

Who couldn't use a deck of cards for some non-wired fun? Even if you have a deck at home, carrying these on trips can help pass the time during your travels or give you a game to play when you reach your destination. You can pick these up at the drugstore, the dollar store, your favorite mass merchant, or order online. You can even play solitaire with them.

18. Puzzles

Puzzles are appropriate for all ages. My cousins used to always have a large puzzle set up on a card table in their den for leisurely puzzle-solving mixed with conversation. Prices can vary on these, but you can usually snag inexpensive ones at the dollar store or your favorite mass merchant.

19. Sudoku

Sudoku books are equally appropriate for all ages. You can pick these up at the bookstore, grocery store, or find one at $2.99.

20. Coloring book with crayons

Here's more fun but this time for kids only. If you stocked up on crayons during the back-to-school sales, you're nearly ready for this gift; if not, I recommend buying a sturdy brand of crayons (I like Crayola, as other brands I've tried tend to break easily) and pairing it with an inexpensive coloring book, often found at the dollar store.

21. Die-cast toy cars

Die-cast cars are great for busy hands. Even little ones appreciate the sturdiness of these types of cars, which tend to race faster than the cheaper variety. A well-selected edition should create some excitement.

22. Star Wars (LEGO) key chains

For the Star Wars fan on your list, you can buy Princess Leia key chains from LEGO Shop (Shop.Lego.com) along with many other characters, such as Yoda, Chewbacca, and Darth Vader.
