

JOB AND CAREER RESOURCES

Indeed

(indeed.com)—Most comprehensive job listings aggregator and search engine. Indeed.com grabs job listings from all over the Internet and puts them in one place. You can search by job title and location.

ProBlogger Job Board

(probblogger.com/jobs)—Premier job board for professional blogging gigs run by uber-problogger, Darren Rowse. If you want to find a blogging job, this is the only stop you need.

Upwork (formerly Elance)

By far the largest marketplace of freelancers and freelance employers. You can get freelance gigs ranging from software dev, design, writing, virtual assistant, research, and more. Upwork's success as a marketplace is due to its escrow service, provider rating system, and global reach.

Work at Home Success

(workathomesuccess.com)—The most comprehensive site for people looking to work at home. WAHS has getting-started guides, where to find work-at-home job listings, and a community of other work-at-home folks sharing tips and tricks. WAHS gives you the tools and know-how to earn a side income from home or to start your new work-at-home career.

PERSONAL FINANCE AUTHORS

Leo Babauta

(zenhabits.net)—Leo is the author of Zen Habits, one of the best resources for useful articles on productivity, simplicity, and personal finances. Leo's book, The Power of Less, is a powerful tool that will help you strip away the petty distractions so you can enjoy a happier, simpler life. You can download a free copy of Leo's ebook, Thriving on Less, on Amazon.

Timothy Ferriss

(fourhourworkweek.com)—The first time I finished reading The 4-Hour Workweek I immediately bought a bunch of copies for my closest friends. Although I haven't cut down my workweek to four hours just yet, many of Tim's best ideas—sticking to your strengths, outsourcing mindless work, and exploring cheaper living arrangements—have made a tremendously positive impact on my life.

Jonathan Fields

(jonathanfields.com)—Jonathan made a seemingly impossible career transformation from a tired attorney to a happy entrepreneur who can't wait to get out of bed every morning. In his book Career Renegade, Jonathan shares his secret of how you can escape an unhappy career. Filled with actionable advice, Career Renegade is as helpful as it is inspiring. If you're not 100% happy with your job, you'd be crazy not to read this book.

Trent Hamm

(thesimpledollar.com)—Trent Hamm is the author of 365 Ways to Live Cheap! and editor of 1001 Ways to Make Money If You Dare. His book is filled with great DIY and frugality tips, such as using cold water to wash most clothes to save money minimizing your carload to reduce your gas mileage by 5%, and buying a deep freezer to save 30% off meat. Trent's blog, The Simple Dollar is the most respected personal finance voice in the blogosphere.

Ellie Kay

(elliekay.com)—Ellie went from having a $40,000 consumer debt to being completely debt-free in less than three years. She did this as a mother of seven, living off one military income. One of her latest books, Living Rich for Less, shows readers how to put more than $30,000 into their pockets in the next year.

Suze Orman

(suzeorman.com)—Suze is like that tough teacher you once hated in high school but now remember with fondness because of how much you learned from her. Wise Bread readers constantly share how Suze changes lives for the better. If we can ask only one personal finance expert for help, we'd use our final lifeline on Suze.