

the best way to use it). If you're feeling experimental, here are 21 (the legal drinking age in most states) different uses for beer, other than just pouring it down your throat.

1. Put it in your chili

One of the best ways to add flavor and a little extra liquid to a chili is with a nice bottle of beer. Use the darker beers, as they have more flavor and add more punch.

2. Make bread

My wife's grandma is from Germany and she swears by a good loaf of beer bread.

INGREDIENTS

- 2½ cups self-rising flour
- ½ cup all-purpose flour
- ¼ cup brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon Italian seasoning
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon onion powder
- 1 12 oz. can of beer
- ¼ cup butter or margarine, melted

DIRECTIONS

1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees F (190 degrees C).
2. Lightly grease a 9x5-inch baking pan.

3. In a bowl, mix the dry ingredients.
4. Add the beer, mix well, place in pan.
5. Top with melted butter.
6. Bake 45 to 55 minutes. Cool on a wire rack.

3. Kill slugs

Worms are a gardener's best friend, but slugs are not. Salt is a great way to dry up these slimy pests, but that means you have to find them first. Instead, entice them with a little beer, which slugs love. Simply pour a little into some empty jars and place them in the soil, with the rims of the jars at ground level. The slugs will drop in for a drink, but they can't get back out. And what a way to go; certainly better than the salt-shriveling death.

4. Take a beer bath

It's said that Cleopatra used to bathe in milk. Pah, that's for lightweights. P. Diddy went one better and filled bathtubs full of expensive champagne at a birthday party. I say, go with the middle ground. Drain a few kegs into the tub and let the invigorating bubbles cleanse the skin and exfoliate. The yeast and other ingredients are great skin-softeners. Then take a long shower.