

as important as a phenomenal pair of shoes. And it had better be one phenomenal watch. While in this country Rolex is sort of known as the gold standard, there are other parts of the world where walking in with a Rolex is equivalent to having purchased your business accessories at a bargain basement department store. What's a billionaire in the making to do? Lose it altogether. These days a watch is just a style accessory. It's much cheaper to glam up your cell phone and get the same recognition.

3. Stylish bottled water

Green is in, and having an eco-friendly water bottle will make you look chic and in the know. Take a look at Nalgene for BPA-free plastic, Klean Kanteen for stainless steel, and Sigg for aluminum.

4. Skip the perfume

The good stuff is insanely expensive. Consider skipping it altogether and just going natural. If you really feel a scent is necessary, try making your own. If custom-blending the perfect personal scent is a little more than you want to attempt, a DIY shower spray is more than doable. You'll still smell great and spend less.

5. Reheel and repair

While you can easily skip the watch, there's no way around the shoes. Find a high-quality pair, even if they are gently used, and take them to a shoe shop where they are good at jazzing up an older pair of quality leather shoes. If that grosses you out, save up until you can get a good set at an outlet store or on clearance. Pick a style that's versatile and don't wear them out unnecessarily. Save them for those meetings where you know you need to make a statement. Keep them repaired and shined, and you've got an investment purchase you can get years of service from.

6. Travel

Think you can't afford to travel for long periods of time to highly coveted destinations? Consider a long-term house-sitting job in London or Paris, or a long-term trip in an exotic location like Africa or Southeast Asia via the hostel or English-language teaching circuit. And nothing gets you in the door faster than a shared knowledge of a location, region, or world-renowned heritage site. And if you're there long term, you'll have plenty of opportunity to take advan-
