

provided through a private insurance company. You pay the company your portion of the plan, and the government pays the rest as a tax credit.

Another option is Christian sharing ministries. With these types of plans, you pay the premium towards a member that needs medical help. While preventive care visits and prescriptions are paid out of pocket, any time your medical bills reach a certain threshold, you submit those needs to the ministry, and they are automatically paid by the membership.