

- APharmaCard.com
- TrueRxSavings.com

Beware, not every pharmacy takes these cards, so call around before you order a script so you don't end up paying full price.

READER TIP:

My family also uses a prescription discount card. None of us have regular prescriptions to fill, so we don't have that option added to our insurance plan. But it's still been nice to save money for when we do need one!

—Olivia, MD

3. USE A COUPON

If you prefer to use a brand-name drug, or don't have access to a generic brand, do a quick Google search for the manufacturer's website to print off coupons. I found one for my current prescription within minutes, and even though a $10-$15 coupon doesn't sound like much, every little bit helps!

Another site to check is InternetDrugCoupons.com. There are hundreds of medications listed, so it's worth a look. One thing to remember, though, is if you have insurance, you probably won't be able to use these coupons on top of your coverage. They are only eligible for those without.

Although this isn't a coupon per se, you may want to look into AstraZeneca to see if you're eligible for their prescription savings program. This company probably sounds familiar as it's tacked on to the end of almost every prescription based television commercial, but it provides medications at no cost to patients who need them.

4. GO GENERIC