

If you have an employee-based health plan, it doesn't hurt to check and see if they offer a Flexible Spending Account or Health Savings Account. Although these are getting more and more rare (ours was eventually taken away in NY), FSA's and HSA's allow you to set aside tax-free dollars for use in prescription payments, copays, and sometimes even deductibles. You would be surprised by how much you can save in just taxes on these types of expenses, so it's worth asking!
