

Remember, when you commit to reducing debt, especially something as big as a mortgage, you must sacrifice some things in order to save. Analyze every purchase and eliminate anything that doesn't help you reach your goal. It's not always fun, but think of how much you'll be able to put towards that mortgage if you save every possible penny!

You'll also want to print out an amortization schedule as a tangible reminder of your payments. I do this for every loan we've ever had, and it's incredibly motivating to highlight each month as we pay it off. You can find a customizable amortization schedule at

CreativeSavingsBlog.com/Amortization