

- Study Snacks arranged as an “Emergency Kit”
- Tote Bag filled with Office Supplies

Baskets are one of the easiest ways to arrange and personalize a gift. Just think of a theme that would apply to the event you’re attending, set a budget, and head to the store for a fun little shopping spree. Best of all, baskets fit every budget. You determine how big or small of a container you want to fill!

5. BUY DISCOUNTED GIFT CARDS

A lot of people think gift cards are too impersonal, but I love receiving and giving them. Besides, new moms and brides-to-be always have items left over on their registry to buy, and graduates love to pick out their own dorm room supplies. A gift card is the perfect solution!

But if you think gift cards always have to be bought at full price, think again. There are plenty of ways to snag a deal and pay less than the gift card is actually worth:

- GiftsCards.com is one of my favorite ways to buy and sell gift cards. There are hundreds of stores listed for varying amounts. When I last looked, a $25 Babies R’ Us gift card was going for $22.73. I know a 9% discount doesn’t sound like all that much, but when there’s no processing fees, and FREE shipping, why wouldn’t you save the time and money?
- Another way to buy gift cards is to use your credit card rewards to purchase them. Most credit card companies have a “store” where they offer gift cards in exchange for points. Each month or so, they’ll also list a few gift cards on sale, which means you can purchase the card for less than the actual amount.
- Warehouse stores, like Sam’s Club, often have a gift card section where you can buy a variety of gift cards lower than their marked
