

If you've lived with your pet long enough, you know their habits and routines like the back of your hand. This means you also know when something just isn't right. We have saved hundreds of dollars on vet bills because we were able to research the issue on Google and try a home remedy before the problem became too serious.

But if it truly is a medical emergency, the internet can give you loads of resources so you have some idea of what to expect before you head to the vet's office. At the end of the day, we want to keep our pets as healthy as possible, and that means we need to spend a little money on them when it's truly important. Thankfully, there are lots of ways to do it for less!