

DAY 30: SAVE ON HOME OFFICE SUPPLIES

Some girls go crazy over fashion accessories, feel-good chick flicks, and cuddly baby pudge. But me? I geek out over home office supplies. Joseph knows there's nothing that speaks to my heart like a good set of pens and Post-It notes!

At first, it doesn't seem like office supplies could be too expensive, especially since the majority of them cost under $5 apiece. And really, how often do you have to replace pens and paper pads when you can get those for free at vender and county fairs?

But when you factor in bulk paper reams, printer ink, and dare I say pens that actually write, it's easy to go overboard at your local office supply store, or for me...in two specific aisles at Target. Someone tell me why there are always so many notebooks and sticky pads in the most adorable prints and colors?!

It tempts me to buy way more items than I actually need. But I guess that's kind of the point.

Whether you're stocking your own supply cabinet at home, filling your child's backpack for school, or starting a home business that requires more file folders than you ever thought possible, these five tips make sure you repurpose, reuse, and be smart about what you buy:

1. BE STINGY WITH PAPER

Limiting paper use is not just good for your wallet, it's essential for the environment too. Just think about how many pieces of paper you use, print, or handle in a given day. Paper is literally everywhere, including our landfills!

The two biggest culprits are the papers we print, and the papers we write on. For your printer, I strongly encourage you to go paperless and only print what you absolutely need, when you absolutely need it. Trust me, I know
