

Home office supplies generally don't take up a huge portion of the budget, and most of us probably don't even have a separate spending category for them—I just group mine in with a section called “Everything Else.” But that also means this expense often floats around in your budget unchecked, which can result in an unexpected spending problem down the road if you're not careful.

However, with simple planning around the right times of year, being smart about repurposing, and then using what you already have, you can cut this expense down to something that's extremely manageable. In fact, you might not even notice that it's there at all!