

weekend away during the summer, and inspired me to knock out my mortgage even faster. Think about what you want to do with your extra savings as a result of the effort you've put into this challenge.

If you need a place to start, here's what I suggest:

- Build an Emergency Fund (or increase the one you already have). If you don't have an Emergency Fund at all, set a goal of $1,000, and put as much money toward it as you can. If you already have a $1,000 fund set aside, add more cushion to it. A good rule of thumb is three months' worth of expenses so you'll never be caught off guard with a financial hardship.
- Pay off as much debt as you can. Now that you aren't paying as much towards living expenses, you have extra money to aggressively tackle any outstanding debt—this means credit cards, school loans, car payments, medical bills...even your mortgage! Get that debt GONE.
- Save towards something you really want. I strongly believe in the principle of intentional spending, which means you cut back in key areas to spend more on what really matters. Think about what really matters to you, and write down any financial goals that you want to accomplish in the coming year. Now's your chance to finally make them reality!

I hope 31 Days to Radically Reduce Your Expenses has helped you take back that financial control I know you have hidden inside of you. Your financial future awaits!
