

The purchase of a car is just the beginning...it's the cost of ownership that follows you for as long as you have the vehicle. Personally, I think it's smart (or nerdy, depends on who you ask) to track how much you spend on your car over the years. We have a Car Maintenance and Repair Log and write down any time we change the tires, buy new brakes, or take it in for an oil change. It also helps me know which of our cars were duds, and which brands we will be purchasing again.

If you'd like to download your own Car Maintenance and Repair Log (I highly recommend it!), you can do so at

CreativeSavingsBlog.com/ExpenseResources