

has been lulled into thinking that any corrections will continue to be limited," it said. "They will no doubt buy stocks all the way down—the same stocks they are frustrated about missing all the way UP." This was the preamble to the equally sorry state of the heavens, resulting from the New Moon coming in late Wednesday night, the Sun conjuncting with Mercury on Friday the 5th, and Jupiter squaring (90 degrees) Uranus on Saturday the 6th. Two awful configurations would occur on Monday the 8th and Wednesday and Thursday the 10th and 11th. Below this was Mr. Crawford's clear-cut advice:

Look for the TOP of this move between Sept. 3rd and 11th with the best bet falling on the 4th to the 8th. Roll completely out of long positions and into shorts during this dangerous time. We do not want to own stocks over the next few weeks. We could see a hundred-point down DAY during September. . . . Hoping for one last push into new high ground this coming week, we are unloading all stocks and preparing ourselves against the extremes of early frost. BEWARE!

So he said 100 points, and the actual drop was 88. It was impressive regardless. In six months, he'd made at least two accurate predictions. Along with the newsletter, he'd brought along a chart, similar to a historical time line, which showed his remarkable record, dating back to 1977. For independent verification, he again invited me to call Dan Dorfman, a well-known Wall Street reporter.

I was at the point of asking Mr. Crawford to volunteer his next prediction, but prudence caused me to resist the impulse. Whatever his suggestion I probably would have invested in it, and I decided it would be foolish to rush back into the market for astrological reasons when I'd come all this way to hear from the dean of forecasters, the widely followed and highly respected Mr. Kaufman. When I mentioned to Mr. Crawford that I sought to see the great economist, the astrologer replied: "Oh yes, Henry. In 1982, I put out my buy signal three days before he put out his."
