PERSPECTIVE

That the beginning of a historic decline in stock prices is near is the single most crucial fact facing every investor and portfolio manager today. Anyone still invested and not selling into this market rise is ignoring the most crucial message from the stock market pattern since 1929. As then, the stock market in 1995 is stretched far out on a limb. You can rest assured that when the first wave of stock market losses hits, it will once again catch the financial establishment completely off guard.
