

simply be locked out. How would you like to be told that your investments are frozen, that you cannot get out, that you must sit as the market falls lower month after month? Further, consider this. The stock market rose 250% in just five years, until the 1987 peak. If you were in for that ride, you made a fortune, and you made it fast. Despite all the coverage that stocks enjoy in the press today, the major averages have added only 60% since that high, and they have taken nearly eight years to do it. The lesson is, if you want to get the most out of a market, make sure you are there at the start of the new trend. This necessity is even more applicable to the downside. When gold topped out in 1980, it fell from $850/oz. to $474 in two months. So if you say to yourself that you will wait and see if the market proves the outlook in this book correct, fine. Just remember, the early buyer makes the most in a bull market, and the early seller preserves the most in a bear market. By owning high quality yield-bearing instruments in safe currencies now, you may be early, but you will be guaranteed that when stocks, bonds, real estate and the economy finally hit bottom, you will be there with all your purchasing power intact at what is likely to be an even more rewarding opportunity than we had in 1982. Whether the flash point is now or a year from now, the investment landscape years
