

3. Induction and Training

This stage is similar to the briefing, where passengers are trained on fastening their seat belts and managing emergency situations. They are also informed that the same material is available in a booklet.

In an organization, induction is like fastening the seat belt. The basics of operating in the organization are taught in the induction. The training is like a security briefing where the employee's responsibilities are explained.

The employee handbook or an online course on the Learning Management System is provided to the employee for future reference.