

Payslip Design

The design of payslip must include

1. Employee Details -

Including name, employee ID, UAN Number, PAN Number, Bank Account Number.

2. Pay Period -

Period for which payment is being made.

3. Absence and Leave calculation -

The days on which employee did not mark attendance or availed a leave.

4. Earnings and Deductions -

Including arrears (payment for last month if the attendance for the last month is approved this month).

5. Net Pay -

Net pay is calculated by subtracting deductions from earnings. This is the amount which gets transferred to the bank account.

A payslip is generated to transparently share the calculation of salary with employees. This is the most important hygiene document. It is also called salary slip or paycheck. It must be simple, clear and detailed so that employees can understand the calculation of their salary on their own. Else you will be flooded with queries.

We have been discussing that the payment should be made at the end of the pay cycle.

Payslip for the month of June

A typical pay cycle is monthly; therefore, payment should occur at the end of each month. Suppose that certain payments, such as salary advances, are to be made during the middle of month (pay cycle).

Off cycle payslip for July

How will you handle them?
Mid cycle payments are called Off Cycle Payments.
