

Deputation

In the End

The transfer and deputation are prerogatives of an organization. However when they are used as a tool for punishing employees then the court of law stands with the employees rather than standing with the organization. The Supreme Court took a stand in favor of employees when Caparo Engineering transferred its employees who had been working at the Caparo Dewas factory for more than 25 years. They were transferred to a remote location 900 kilometers away from Dewas with the malintention of pressuring employees to resign from the company.

We will discuss resignation and the entire exit management range in the next chapter.

Transfers keep the talent flowing in the organization.
