You found a new restaurant.

The ratings are good. You go to the restaurant. They greet you well. They serve you well. After paying the bill, they ignore you. They do not even open the door for you. Will you rate them high?

The answer is obvious. Brand is not built just by welcoming and engaging employees. It is also built by the way you send people off.

Your exit experience gives you a chance to create a brand ambassador. Gallup analytics says that the employees with positive exit experience are 2.9 times more likely to recommend your organization to others.
