

2. Approval

It is a good practice to obtain approval for the separation request. In case of voluntary exits, approval gives a chance to the manager to have a retention discussion with the employee. If retention discussion fails, they may mutually agree on the last working day of the employee. An organization cannot hold an employee beyond the notice period agreed in the employment contract. In case of involuntary exits, the approval ensures fairness by involving multiple people in the decision making.

