

You must proactively put a contingency plan in place to ensure that if any critical position goes vacant, then you should have someone to immediately fill that position.

This proactive planning is known as Succession Planning.

Succession Planning

Succession planning is the process of creating a talent pool for critical positions within an organization to ensure business continuity. You may use several options to fill critical positions by:

a. Bringing people from outside (Executive Search)

