

Money

People fulfill their lower-level needs in order to transition to the next level of needs. The theory states that people work in order to earn money and fulfill their physiological needs.

Safety

When they have enough money to meet their physiological way they start seeking safety needs.

Same way, they keep transitioning to the needs of belonging, esteem, and self-actualization. The theory forms the base for the concept of total rewards.

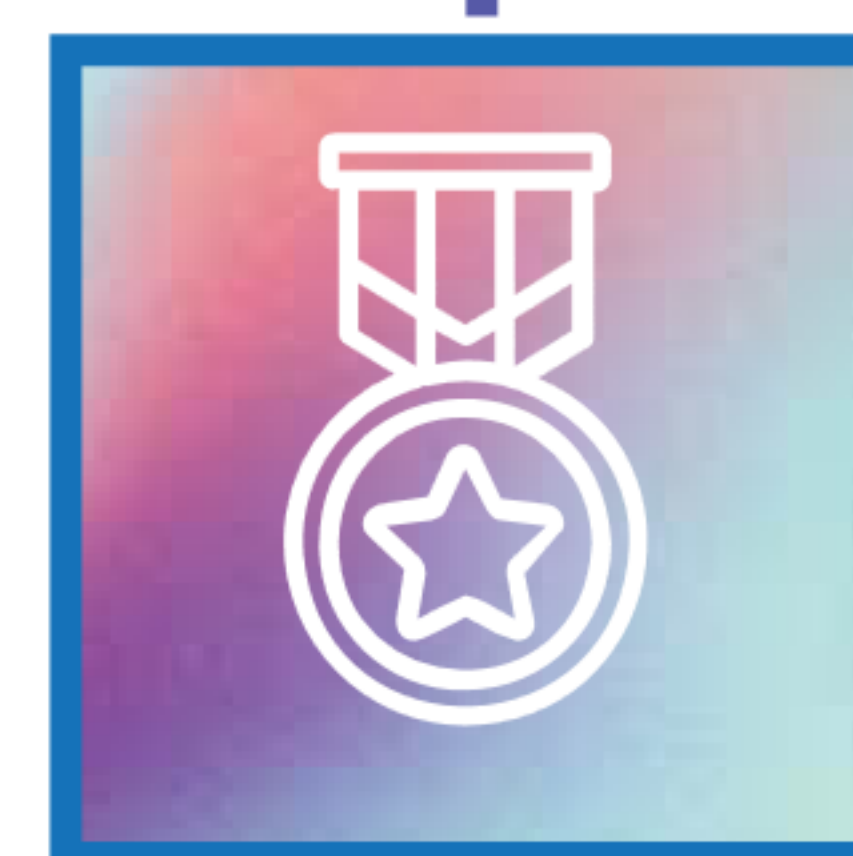

Total Rewards

Employees work and get rewards in exchange. The rewards can be extrinsic or intrinsic.

Extrinsic Rewards

They are tangible. They include salary, incentives, and gifts.

Intrinsic Rewards

They are intangible. They include feedback, appreciation, and recognition
